Kipling in India

HIS, O my Best Beloved, is a story. Now attend all over again and listen!

We heard that Rufus had given a talk on Rudyard Kipling in India in April, and invited him to tell us about it. Rufus had actually shaved off his beard leaving his moustache to achieve something of the Kipling look, but he has too much (albeit thinning) hair to pass as a Rudyard. Nevertheless he wrote this:

Kipling was born in India and spent about a dozen years there, mainly in two chunks: one until he was five, and from just before his 17th birthday until he was 23. He writes that when aged 16 years and 9 months he returned to India the influence of England fell away and never fully returned. As a child Kipling had spent a great deal of time with the servants speaking what he calls the 'vernacular' (probably a form of Hindi), and on his return 12 years later he found the words returned to him, even though he couldn't remember what they meant.

Rufus came to live in England when he was nearly 10, and to this day recalls words and sentences in Greek which he doesn't really understand.

Aged 16 Kipling started to work on a newspaper, one of the two in India where he learnt his trade. At the first he was worked very hard under the severe supervision of the editor, who no doubt had to shape such a young assistant. He used to spend a month each summer in the hill station of Simla, where he observed the British elite enjoying power and pleasure. This prompted him to set some of his stories here.

Kipling has enjoyed a roller-coaster of a reputation: from winning the Nobel Prize for Literature and writing the favourite poem in the English language ("If"), to being abhorred by critics and accused of racism. He may also be regarded as an excellent story teller, full of contradictions, with a great love of children and animals. He was perhaps not such an unrepresentative example of his age, bridging the 19th and 20th centuries.

Whatever else one might say, he is the most quoted author in most books of quotations, after the Bible and Shakespeare, with a wonderful use of language ... and often misquoted. Many people forget he said "There is neither East nor West, Border nor Breed nor Birth when two strong men stand face to face tho' they come from the ends of the earth."

What we've been listening to

How much do you know about the world? Try Hans Rosling's Ignorance Test. 10 mins at bbc.in/1ctJfYF

How to beat Ebola is linked from the same page. Both outstanding.

You can read this, past issues and more at quakerscotland.org/south-edinburgh

The newsletter is usually distributed on the last Sunday of each month. Send things you'd like to see to neilturn@gmail.com. Not on the list to get it? Same address. Deadline the Sunday before.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

To Callum, who will be 16 on the 5th!

Bringing legal privileges such as joining the army.

'Yoga Joes' by Dan Abramson, from his Kickstarter site

ON THE WEB

Our Facebook Page of the month is Grammarly (4,793,072 likes).

Grammarly is a business that gets you to pay to have your grammar corrected. Like really?

Quaker relevance: 34%.

Good jokes, but it struggles with informal Scots. Its Fbk page relays useful advice:
